2. In the Indian Boiler Regulations, 1950 (hereinafter referred to as the said regulations) for sub-regulation (a) of Regulation 545, the following sub-regulation shall be substituted, namely :—
  - (a) The dished end plates of boilers shall be in one piece made from one rolled plate. Where this is impracticable owing to large diameter, the dished end plate may be made from two plates fusion butt-welded together prior to hot forming, provided that the welded joint is radiographed after hot forming and a fully representative test plate of weld is examined and tested. The flat end plates may be made from two pieces by fusion butt-welding. (See figures XII/1 and XII/2. Other forms of welded seams may be accepted by the Inspecting Authority.) In the latter case, the line of welding shall be parallel to the horizontal axis of the boiler and shall run through the centre line of furnace or furnaces of Lancashire and similar types of boilers. In the case of Marine type boilers, the weld shall be located preferably between two rows of bar stays or if there is only one row of bar stays between this row and the top row of stay tubes and shall be subjected to a spot radiographic examination, otherwise it shall be subjected to full radiographic examination.”

3. In regulation 547 of the said regulations, for sub-regulation (b) the following sub-regulation shall be substituted, namely:—

"(b) Hemispherical fireboxes—Hemispherical fireboxes shall be pressed to form by machine in progressive stages without thinning and shall be annealed on completion. Where necessary two plates may be butt-welded together, provided the welded joint is radiographed after hot forming and fully representative test plate of the weld is examined."
